

Post-production supervisor training

October 27 and 28, 2023 – online workshop

November 10 and 11, 2023 – online workshop

November 23-25, 2023 - In-person workshop in Halle (Saale)

To meet the demand for specialists in post-production, the International Academy of Media and Arts e.V. (IAMA), together with the Amsterdam Post Lab and the Postpro Network Halle, is offering further training as post-production supervisor for professionals for the third time. The further training program is oriented to the increased challenges of the market (digitization, requirements of streaming services, workflows, budgeting, etc. and new formats and filming options) and empowers the participants to take on the next film and series production. Experts from the German and international film industry ensure a well-founded training and practice-oriented exchange. Successful completion of the course is certified by the IAMA in cooperation with the Chamber of Industry and Commerce education center Halle-Dessau.

TARGET GROUP

At the professional level, the training course is aimed at holders of the following positions in the production and post-production sector:

Producers, production managers, production assistants, editors, directors as well as other related professional profiles with a high level of experience.

OBJECTIVES

The course is intended to inform participants about the specialization of the different individuals on current standards and requirements in the workflow of the entire post-production process. The process of post-production is thereby placed in the context of the respective narrative. The training enables participants to design and implement future projects from the perspective of the post-production supervisor. Therefore, the participants are invited and encouraged to bring their own project into the training, which is in preparation and comes from the fields of fiction, documentary, animation, or virtual production. The IAMA also provides participants without their own project with an example project on the basis of which the contents of the course are explained and processed.

PROGRAM

The workshop days will take place in individual modules, in which each component of the post-production is extensively discussed and reflected upon, and clearly explained and illustrated by example projects (cases studies). Individual modules are repeated and the participants are given tasks to help consolidate the learned material in a practice-oriented manner. Both individual and group work sessions are initiated, which allows participants to discuss and apply what they have learned in small groups. Group leaders support the participants in this through coaching.
